“ My parents, Henry and Johanna Postma, both now deceased, considered your mom and dad two of their closest friends. Our family visited with you often, usually after church on Sunday night. I remember playing "Simon Says" with Tim on the basement stairs. Also remember lightning striking a tree right next to your house while we were all looking out the window just as it struck. My sister, Bonnie, claims she was hit. The window that we were looking out broke either from the tree or the lightning itself. Sorry to read of your loss. - Fred Postma
