“ This saddens me a great deal. I became good friends with John since first meeting him about ten years ago. He was about the same age as my father and they shared some of the same traits. The last time I talked to John he was doing very well and sounded the happiest I had ever heard him. John was someone who really enjoyed having good conversations. He spent several years taking the Gospel to the jails and used a lot of his income to support outreach projects. He was very generous with offerings to our church and other ministries I know of. I will miss my friend very much—our great conversations, humorous times and solemn prayers together. My sincerest condolences to the family. We do have the blessed hope of seeing our loved ones again when our Savior returns. Keep looking up!
