“ I have known Rick since the 1st grade although we both followed very different paths after high school. He usually sat at the desk to my right or behind me as we were almost always placed in alphabetical order back then. I will always remember his undying (almost raffish) sense of humor! He was always full of life and I don't think he met anyone with whom he could not speak on their level. So nonjudgmental in those socially turbulent times! Years later, we both returned to the Rensselaer area in the same year and I was not surprised to learn he had a Dr's degree in psychology. We had both lived in CA & TX so we had much to talk about. I am so deeply saddened by his early demise and have a deep sense of regret that I did not spend more time visiting him these past few years. Deepest sympathy to his family whom he spoke of often and with much affection. As the Italians say, "Ora dorme con gli angeli".

“ I met Rick in the early 90's through working in Gero-psych. We became fast friends and for awhile he was my supervisor. Rick's spirit was indomitable and he showed much care and compassion for those around him. Even after he changed jobs and moved back to Indiana, we kept in touch. Rick especially touched my heart when he expressed feeling upset with me for not asking him to go with me back East when my mother died. He was hurt that I did not consider that he would do that for me. This is a perfect example of the extent Rick valued the people he cared about. Rick was so loving and generous. We cried at times, had heart to heart talks, argued but mostly laughed together. Thank you Rick for being there, through it all.

“Rick Price always seemed one step ahead of me in his knowledge of the world. He has taken another step. Some people might say he took a giant leap forward a week ago Thursday. From what I have witnessed, when people I loved passed on, I think a single step describes it better. The veil is lifted. Our loved one leaves behind his natural body. With one step he enters into another world. His survivors take small comfort in their leave taking through prescribed rituals of farewell. Jesus, however, was blunt: "Let the dead bury the dead. Come, follow me," he said. And so we do with that final step from this life to the next. This is my belief.

I have on my desk, and there it will remain, the photo taken last May of us college friends gathered about Rick's backyard swing. There is a quality of light to that photo, a light that illuminates the happiness we all felt the moment the photo was snapped. For one brief moment, in unison, our hearts were content to be at this one place. Rick brought us there. It seems to me, he continues to lead the way. Of course, if Rick were to have the last say, he would say he was, "leading us on." I can hear his warmhearted chuckle now.

“Rick was a student in my graduate course at the University of Houston. I quickly recognized his exceptionalism. He later moonlighted as a child therapist at Plan 21. I was the CEO. From there we became friends. Rick had an indomitable spirit which will exceed his years on earth. Michael the Archangel is the guardian of souls. I am sure that Rick is now under his powerful protection. Joe Madonia

“ Rick and I met in 1980 when I was assigned as his advisor for his doctoral program. He was a stellar student and educated me and others in so many ways throughout the 34 years that we have known each other. You had an uncanny way of making the lives of others so much better. I lit some lavender incense for you which are my deceased parents favorite in our home altar. I played the very first tape of disco songs that you made for me in 1981. Mahalo for being a wonderful person in my life. The Japanese say "Geido Ichidai" which means once in a lifetime. Yeah buddy a person like you comes along once in a lifetime. Please know that you made a difference! :) mike

“ As a former F & M bank employee in Rensselaer that always wondered who that lady was that had a baby stroller with not one, two, but three little ones in it, you can be sure I was eventually enlightened when Rollo E. Price was hired away from Financial service, down by the bridge, to work at the Farmers and Merchants Bank. Thereafter we got to hear about 'those three' every day !!! It was mostly about bath time at the Prices. I guess Rollo thought that since we were all old-maids there we should be exposed to some real family life! So, Patti and Bill, tho we have not eye-balled each other much, especially these latter years, I want to extend my sympathy to you both....may life continue well for you. Madalyn Miller Wood

I met Rick playing pool in Silverlake, CA in 1992. We had some great adventures camping together, especially our trips to the Saline Valley, CA to our beloved hot springs, a place like no other. We went through the LA riots together, played bridge, played a lot of pool and clubbed it in our younger years. Hard to believe he's gone. I hope he's at peace but I know his spirit is splashing in the hot springs in the Saline Valley.

Hi Mike! I know you were such an important part of Rick's life. It's hard to believe he's gone. Things were not always easy being a friend of Rick's but I always knew he cared, in a deep way for his friends and family. Trust that he truly loved and valued your friendship. Naomi

Thanks for some wonderful memories...Rest in Peace...
